

Cat Parasite Assessment Form

It's really important to keep your cat up to date with parasite treatment, as parasites are uncomfortable for pets and can also cause severe reactions. Certain parasites can also transmit some nasty diseases to both your cat and your family.

A number of aspects of a cat's lifestyle, behaviour and environment can impact on how frequently parasite treatments are recommended. Whether your cat likes to roam widely or stay closer to home, trips outside can mean exposure to parasites and bringing back an unwanted guest or two!

Even truly indoor-only cats can still become exposed to parasites brought in by visitors - pets or people!

Complete the following assessment form and share your answers with one of the veterinary team, who will be happy to discuss your cat's needs and suitable product options.

1) How often do you currently treat your cat for fleas and ticks?

- ☐ When I think they need it
- ☐ Once monthly
- ☐ Once every three months
- ☐ Other _____

2) How often do you currently treat your cat for worms?

- ☐ When I think they need it
- ☐ Once monthly
- ☐ Once every three months
- ☐ Other _____

Is your cat:

- 3) Under 6 months of age? ☐
- 4) Pregnant or lactating? ☐
- 6) Allowed outdoors? ☐
- 7) A regular hunter? ☐
- 8) Fed raw meat? ☐
- 9) Living with children under 5 years of age? ☐
- 10) Living with someone who is immunocompromised? ☐
- 11) Known to suffer from a flea bite allergy? ☐

And finally:

- 12) Have you seen parasites on your cat or other pets recently (e.g. fleas/ticks on the skin, signs of mites, or worms/segments in the faeces)? ☐
- 13) Do you have any other pets that go outside? ☐

If you are unsure about any of the questions above, simply speak to a member of our team. Whichever products we recommend, it is important to follow the prescribing instructions carefully and always read the package insert leaflet.

It's a good idea to make a calendar reminder to ensure repeat treatments are given when they are due. We look forward to helping to protect your cat and your home from parasites!
